Japanese Manners

Before meals in Japan, people say "Itadaki-masu". Some English guidebooks may say that it means, "I will eat now!", "Dig in!" or "Let's eat!", but the literal meaning is, "I will humbly receive lives!" It is a phrase used to show your appreciation for the blessings of nature and the lives of other creatures because you are taking the precious gift of life from something else in order for you to continue living.

After meals, people say "Gochisou-sama (deshita)." This is used to show your thanks to the people who prepared the meal for you. Even if you cooked the meal by yourself, many people, such as farmers, fishermen, and craftsmen have been involved to provide the ingredients for you. In Japan, it is considered good manners to show your appreciation to every person involved. So, by saying "Itadaki-masu" before meals and "Gochisou-sama (deshita)" after meals, you shall be respected, too!

Food Culture - otoshi

At most Japanese-style izakaya bars, a small side dish known as otoshi is served as soon as you order drinks. This custom is deeply rooted in Japanese tradition and has been widely accepted by izakaya customers. Please keep the following in mind.

1. Although otoshi is served automatically, it is not complimentary. In most cases, you will be charged anywhere between 300 and 500 yen.
2. You never know what you will get until the otoshi is served. It's rather like gachapon (capsule-toy vending machines.)
3. Otoshi is not listed on the menu in most cases.

Some people may wonder why they have to pay for a dish they haven't ordered but otoshi serves as a substitute for a cover or service charge.

In Japan, you don't have to tip. So, it makes sense to pay for the otoshi when paying the bill at an izakaya.

How to use coin-operated parking lots

*Parking systems vary by facility (Yokosuka Port Market, Coaska Bayside Stores, Yokosuka More's City, and Soleil Hill). However, most coin-operated parking lots around the city operate as described below.

Coin-operated parking lots in Japan are typically located outdoors and are accessible to anyone at any time. In most cases, the fee for the time used is paid using a fully-automated fare adjustment machine after use.

The mechanism varies depending on the location and the size of the parking lot, with the most common type being the lock type. When a car is parked, a sensor detects it, the lock plate rises, and the system starts a timer.

Since coin-operated parking is primarily intended for short-term use, most facilities impose a maximum parking limit of 48 hours per use. Please be aware that if you exceed this limit, your vehicle will be deemed abandoned and a warning sign will be posted!

How to use the Keikyu Bus

(Yokosuka Area: Yokosuka, Miura, Hayama, Zushi, Kamakura)

Check the destination on the display at the front or side of the bus.

Get on the bus through the back door.

IC Card

If you have an IC card (PASMO, Suica...), touch it on the reader.

Cash

If you pay in cash, take a numbered ticket.
*Tickets are not issued at bus terminals.

Press the button when you get close to the bus stop where you want to get off.

Check the fare indicator on the front to find fare.

Touch your IC card on the reader before getting off.

Put the exact cash and your numbered ticket into the slot.

If you don't have any coins or exact change, you can use the money changer at the front.
*The machine accepts: ¥50, ¥100, and ¥500 coins, and ¥1,000 bills.

For more information, please check the Keikyu Bus Corporation website.
